A GLASS OF WINE FROM THE MORNING

Here's a place that has spared a thought for those unfortunate jetlagged foreigners who find themselves wandering around in a daze, not knowing whether it's morning, afternoon, or the middle of the night.

Tarel is the first wine bar that's already open in the morning and also serves coffee. And the owner bakes his own bread. Stopping by for lunch on the go is also a good idea.

A COFFEE SHOP IN THE LAND OF TEA

Wife & Husband has a three-word philosophy: coffee, antiques, and picnics. This one-of-a-kind place allows you to enjoy the first while browsing the second, before renting everything you need to enjoy an outdoor lunch in spring.

When asked 'So, what's next?', the owners shrug. Indeed, they have discovered a recipe for happiness in this tiny, cozy space on the ground floor of their home, with its meticulously roasted coffee and to-die-for cheese-and-honey toast that requires no further tweaking.

N.B: seating capacity is limited, so there may be a bit of a wait outside. An opportunity to learn to appreciate, like a true Japanese, that waiting only enhances your pleasure.

A CONCEPT STORE IN THE HEART OF A TEMPLE

When you ask, 'Where can I find a really good concept store in Kyoto?', you probably don't expect to be directed to ... a temple.

And yet, D&Department is the best answer: in the heart of a temple, a boutique, tea room/restaurant, and exhibition space welcome you solicitously.

The icing on the cake? They also have a publishing house, whose poetic offerings are well worth lingering over.

A MAGICAL NIGHT TWO HOURS FROM KYOTO

Craving a big breath of fresh air? A break in your hectic sightseeing schedule?

There's a traditional house just two hours outside of Kyoto that's perfect for recharging your batteries. Located in Ine, a fishing village on the Sea of Japan, this house is part of a crazy global itinerant hotel project.

Carefully considered and dedicated hospitality that's perfectly suited to the passage of time.
